RED RIVER GOES OVER BANK

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

WILL ROGERS poked fun over the radio Sunday night at these send-a-dime chain letters; somebody else was denouncing them seriously in a radio speech Monday noon from Fort Worth—but what's still more serious, I myself got half a dozen of them in the last three days.

Hospital Week to Be Observed Here by Julia Chester

Florence Nightingale Week Is May 6 to 11 in United States

MEDICAL HISTORY

Ancient Hindu Hospitals Supported by Tax on Profits of Merchants

In observance of Florence Nightingale week, May 6 through May 11, Mrs. Frank Miles, chairman of Julia Chester hospital board, has prepared a series of three articles dealing with the progress, problems and benefits of hospitals. The first article:

By Mrs. Frank Miles

The care of the sick throughout the ages may be taken as an index of human progress.

The hospital idea reached a relatively high stage of development in ancient India, medieval Europe, and in recent times in the United States and elsewhere.

The ancient Hindu books contain laws pertaining to hospitals. Each village was to construct, under the direction of the health officer, a well ventilated, strong building protected from dust, wind, smoke, noise and odors.

Money for hospitals was obtained by a tax on every gain of the merchants. Egypt as well as Greece and Rome were far behind India in the development of their hospitals. Their sick were gathered in the temples and the priests endeavored to treat them through dreams and divine oracles.

Christian Hospitals

From this it is seen that the germs from the hospital idea were present among ancient peoples; but the spirit of antiquity toward sickness and misfortune was not one of compassion, and the disposition to minister to human suffering on an extended scale has arisen from the Christian religion.

Much might be said of the great hospital movements initiated by Pope Innocent III in the years 1198, the prominent English hospital founded as far back as 1137, famous hospitals built by the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, Knights of Malta and the Knights of St. Lazarus.

In France many of these hospitals were called Hotel Dieu, meaning place for God's hospitality. The Hotel Dieu is the oldest hospital in the world. It was founded in 651 A. D. and today is a modern departmentalized hospital, accommodating over 800 patients.

Early American Hospitals

The first hospital in the new world was erected by Cortez in the City of Mexico in 1542. The first hospital in what is now the United States was built on Manhattan Island in 1653. Florence Nightingale and Louis Pasteur worked in different fields, but their lives gave an immense impetus to the hospital movement.

The results of Pasteur's great work

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

ILL. U. S. PAT. OFF.

I threw them in the waste basket—and this is why.

You start on the mistaken assumption that you are going to put a dime in and take about $1,500 out.

But that isn't what you are going to do if you honestly carry out the terms of the "chain letter." The letter says:

Give a copy of the letter to five of your friends to whom you wish prosperity to come and whom you know WILL NOT BREAK THE CHAIN.

The assumption is that if you once put your name in the pot, beginning with a dime, you will carry out faithfully the idea of putting down a dime on each and every letter that comes to you thereafter.

If you expect 15,000 people to send you a dime you should be equally certain that sooner or later you will be expected to cash in 15,000 demands drawn against you.

The best that can be said for this is that it is a 50-50 gamble that you get all your own money back—much less trying to make anything.

The worst that can be said for it is that it is like pretty much everything else in life—it's worth some money to the first few folks who start it, but the late-comers are suckers.

Railroad Pension Law Ruled Invalid by the Supreme Court

Application to Employees Not Engaged in Interstate Commerce Causes Court to Hold Entire Bill Illegal—Arkansas State Decisions

WASHINGTON.—(P)—The entire railroad retirement act, affecting more than a million employees, was held unconstitutional Monday by the United States Supreme Court.

The court ruling was directed especially at that section of the act which made it apply to all employees of interstate commerce carriers, including employees not directly engaged in interstate commerce.

The opinion stated that the invalid features of the act could not be separated, and it was necessary to declare the whole act invalid.

Arkansas Supreme Court

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—The Arkansas Supreme Court approved Monday the hiring of a special attorney by the State Highway Commission.

The court ordered released to Pace & Davis, law firm, a $5,000 warrant held up by State Comptroller Griffin Smith on grounds that it was not a valid claim against the state.

The comptroller contended that the law authorized only the attorney general to represent state departments.

The court said that if the attorney general were not able to handle all litigation the power to secure services, other attorneys was clearly implied.

The supreme court affirmed a $5,000 judgment in favor of Joe T. Thomason for injuries received when bolt of lightning struck the Hope-Basket company plant.

Thomason claimed his injuries resulted from the company's negligence in leaving disconnected wires in an uninsulated condition.

Reaches 27 Feet, Two Above Flood Mark; 3-Inch Rain

Late Spring Floods Threatening Many Sections of Arkansas

HIGH 30 PREDICTED

Forecaster Puts Fulton Crest at 30 to 32 Feet This Week

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Rising streams in Arkansas, which threatened to burst through levees repeating earlier spring flood damage, covered thousands of acres of fertile farm land Monday.

Farmers in the bottom land of the Current, Little, Black, and Bib Black rivers in the vicinity of Success were ready for quick evacuation to higher ground if the streams continue to rise.

Red river is running bank-high Monday, with an almost certain prospect of overflow by the end of the week, on the heels of a nearly 3-inch rain in this section.

The Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment Station reported Monday that rainfall from Thursday through Sunday totaled 2.81 inches.

Red river at Fulton Monday stood at 27 feet, compared to the flood-stage of 25 feet, with an estimate by J. W. Cronk, U. S. meteorologist at Shreveport, that a stage of 30 to 32 feet would be reached by Friday or Saturday.

The Red rose two feet in the last two days.

2 Days of Rain

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Damaging floods threatened Arkansas again Sunday as heavy rains fell for 48 continuous hours, overflowing farm lands, blocking tributary roads and impeding traffic on main highways. Cold weather accompanied the deluge.

The forecast for Monday is for unsettled weather and occasional showers. Rising temperatures are expected in the north and east, however.

Rainfall recorded in Little Rock at 7 Sunday night totaled 2.94 inches for the preceding 24 hours, and the mean temperature of 50 for that period was 17 degrees below normal.

One death, that of Roy McCallum, aged 40, crippled Sebastian county farmer, was attributed to the heavy rainfall. His body was found Sunday in a pasture overflowed by water from a creek, six miles southeast of Greenwood.

With many lesser streams of the state already out of their banks, damaging newly planted acres of farm land and driving a few residents of their valleys to higher ground, the Weather Bureau predicted rises in all the major streams.

Higher Stages Predicted

The Arkansas said the Weather Bureau will reach 22 feet at Ozark Wednesday, 21 at Dardanelle Thursday, 22 at Little Rock Friday, and 24 at Pine Bluff Saturday.

The White will reach 30 feet at Calico Rock Monday night, 33 at Batesville at the same time, 30 at Newport Wednesday, and will rise rapidly at Georgetown.

The Black will reach 26 at Black Rock Monday.

The Ouachita reached 28 at Arkadelphia Sunday night and will go to 40 feet at Camden Wednesday.

Rampaging small streams blocked traffic on Highway 70 east and west of DeQueen, cut Mena off entirely from highway transportation until Highway 71 became passable Sunday night, and flooded sections of the business and residential districts in Clarksville.

Highway 8 out of Arkadelphia and Highway 3 out of Marianna were reported impassable.

But delays were reported over Highway 10 from Little Rock reported they had to detour over 65 because Fourche La Pave overflow blocked traffic over Highways 9 and 10 in Perry county.

NEW ORLEANS.—(P)—Cotton futures opened quiet Monday, unchanged to seven points lower.

Dizzy Dean Beats Ruth and Braves

30,000 See Boston Shut Out 7 to 0 on the Home Grounds

BOSTON, Mass.—(AP)—With a wide grin on his face, Dizzy Dean waved his outfielders back to the fence and grooved a fist third strike on Babe Ruth Sunday when they faced each other for the second time in the St. Louis Cardinals' 7 to 0 shutout over the Boston Braves before a crowd of 30,000.

This handsome turnout, attracted by the star right-hander's decidedly one-sided feud with the home run slugger was stunned into silence as Dizzy passed the Babe with six pitched balls, none of which called for saving, in the first inning, fanned him with four throws in the fourth and then made him ground out on his last trip to the plate in the sixth.

Before making the Babe almost broke his back going for his steaming strikeout ball, Dizzy sent one of Ed Brandt's southpaw heaves screaming over the Ruthian head into the left field stands on his first time at bat in the second, when 10 Cards went to the plate and hit in all but one of their runs.

Omaha Gallops to Victory in Derby

Son of Gallant Fox Follows Sire—Triumph in 1930 and 1935

CHURCHILL DOWNS, Louisville, Ky.—(AP)—Gallant son of a gallant daddy, William Woodwards, Omaha stretched his long legs comfortably Saturday on the cold, rain drenched surface of the historic downs oval and galloped to a smashing victory in the sixty-first Kentucky Derby.

While a thoroughly soaked but highly excited crowd of nearly 50,000 spectators roared their acclaim, the big, gangling chestnut colt administered a sound beating to 17 rival 3-year-olds, including the crack filly favorite, Nellie Flegg, and duplicated the triumph of his famous sire, Gallant Fox, the winner of the 1930 derby for the New York banker, whose colors Omaha also carried Saturday afternoon.

Running with much the same confidence his daddy showed five years ago, Omaha steered clear of the early jam, took command on the back stretch and never was seriously menaced in the long stretch drive despite a game finish of the powerful black colt Roman Soldier, the Texas Derby winner.

Pope Plays Nazi 'Pagan' Campaign

Resents German Treatment of Pilgrims Returning From Rome

VATICAN CITY, Rome, Italy—(AP)—Pope Pius Monday voiced a strong protest against Nazi Germany's treatment of 2,000 young Catholics returning to their fatherland after an Easter pilgrimage to Rome.

The pope said of the Nazis: "The wish, in the name of a so-called Christianity, to dechristianize Germany, and they wish to conduct the country back to a barbaric paganism."

ST. PAUL, Minn.—(AP)—Byron Bolton, Bremer kidnaping defendant who pleaded guilty three weeks ago, Monday pointed out Harry Sawyer, arrested in Mississippi last Friday night by federal officers, as the man who pointed out Edward G. Bremer at a St. Paul bowling alley before he was kidnaped.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Games Change Routine of Exercising.

If you're bored to death with setting-up and reducing exercises and are just about ready to scream every time they're mentioned, give them up during the summer months and go in for exercises that are equally beneficial, but certainly more fun to do.

You can take a hint from the youngsters that nearly knock you down at every street corner and get some roller skates. If you don't want to skate on the street or in public parks (though there's no reason why you shouldn't if you like the idea), go to a regular rink two or three times a week or switch along your own sidewalk between house and garage. Don't skate too much the first few weeks. Later you'll be able to keep at it for a fairly long time.

Then, of course, there's bowling. And fine exercise it is, too. Why not organize a bowling club and get your friends to bowl with you one afternoon a week?

If you have a spacious basement or an attic that isn't of much use to any member of the family, set up a ping-pong table and a deck tennis net. Those two games, in addition to being good fun, really will keep your hips and arms slender—your waistline supple. The more strenuous spring and summer sports are good for your figure, disposition and general outlook on life. Tennis keeps you slender and graceful. Golf will improve your carriage and give your body a certain grace and ease. Riding increases circulation and takes pounds off hips and thighs. Swimming may not make you lose weight, but it certainly will equalize it. It's good for your complexion, too.

NEXT: More about sports.

The DARK BLOND

By CARLETON KENDRAKE © 1935 NEA REPRODUCING.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MILICENT GRAVES, secretary to GEORGE DRINGOLD, finds her employer for his office dead. JARVIS HAPP, a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty shop where she is transformed into a brunet, then takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. She meets MRS. HAPP, HARRY's son, NORMAN, his stepson, ROBERT, and GENTLY, HARRY's mother. DICK GENTLY, VERA DUCHINE, Mrs. HARRY's maid.

She comes to the nearby garage where DETECTIVE BUCHANAN, owner of the garage, is waiting. He calls a tenant of the apartment building to identify her. It proves to be the policeman. Millicent saw in Phyllis Faulconer's room.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVI

DETECTIVE BUCHANAN asked "Is this the Jane?"

Johansen's eyes, which had riveted themselves on Millicent, said "You bet that's the Jane. She can look like a deer when I tell for the first time she's a woman. You sure showed brains in putting the bracelets on her. She's got the smoothest line of any crook I've tackled in a year."

"Is that Phyllis Faulconer?" Buchanan asked.

"You bet that's Phyllis Faulconer. She was in the apartment and she admitted to me she was there when the fighting was going on. I telephoned headquarters when she made a break."

"Yes," Buchanan said. "I telephoned in and they told me you'd reported trouble in that apartment so I figured you'd better come around to make positive identification."

"She was handing you a line?" Buchanan asked.

"I'll say she was handing me a line."

Millicent sat speechless. There was nothing she could say. She was trapped in the web of her own incriminating statements to Johansen, her equally incriminating flight.

A siren sounded outside the door. "Well," Buchanan remarked shaking ashes from his cigar, "that will be the wagon from headquarters. Come on, sister. Here we go."

The siren grew louder. Tires screamed on the turn and then a red roadster skidded into the garage and slid to a stop.

Sergeant Mahoney jumped from the car, banged open the door of the office, looked at Buchanan, then at Millicent.

"Unsnap those handcuffs," he said.

Buchanan's face turned a dull red. "Listen, Sergeant, she's a killer and she's desperate. She's Phyllis Faulconer, all right. I trapped her when she came to the car."

"Unsnap the handcuffs," Sergeant Mahoney said. "I don't like to see a handcuffed in the first place and in the second place I don't think she's Phyllis Faulconer."

"She's the Faulconer woman all right," Johansen said. "I came on her in the apartment."

Sergeant Mahoney flushed. Millicent a quick, questioning glance.

"No," she said. "I'm not Phyllis Faulconer. I was looking for Phyllis Faulconer. Norman Happ went to her apartment and disappeared. There had been a fight and I tried to trail him. This man pounded on the door of the apartment and complained of the noise I didn't know who he was. I went to get away. I didn't tell him I was Phyllis Faulconer, but he assumed I was the one who rent the apartment. I just tried to stall him along, and when I found out he was an officer and was going to investigate, I ran away."

Buchanan thrust the note he had taken from Millicent's purse into Sergeant Mahoney's hand.

"Read that," he said.

Sergeant Mahoney read the note through. His face showed distinct surprise.

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed.

Buchanan smirked. "So you see, Sergeant, I know what I'm doing."

Sergeant Mahoney said, in crisp, authoritative tones, "Very good, Buchanan. You're to be commended upon your zeal. Take off the handcuffs."

There was that in his voice which brooked no argument. Buchanan unlocked the handcuffs.

"Come with me," Sergeant Mahoney said to Millicent.

The garage attendant appeared in the doorway. "Was you interested in the owner of that sedan, or just in the person that was coming in to look it over?" he asked of Detective Buchanan.

"Never you mind what I'm interested in," Buchanan asserted blithely. "You keep your place and do what you're told."

"Okay," the attendant said in a bored voice. "I just thought I'd let you know that while you was sitting up here smoking the Paul corner woman came in and got her car."

"What?" Buchanan exclaimed jumping to his feet. "What the devil do you mean by not letting me know?"

"I didn't know it myself," the attendant said. "Until I saw her going out the door. She must have worked the elevator herself. It was the Paulcorner sedan all right."

Sergeant Mahoney looked accusingly at Buchanan. "Why sit in the office and smoke. Detective?" he asked.

"I wanted to be near the telephone," he said.

Buchanan advanced threateningly toward the garage man. "I've a notion to run you in," he said. "For not letting me know."

"Buloney," the man said. "I did what you told me to. You didn't confide in me none. You wanted me to keep my place and I'm keeping in it."

Sergeant Mahoney said to Buchanan, "Get on her trail. Find phone headquarters. Have all radio cars notified to be on the watch. We want that woman."

To Millicent he said, "Come with me."

He took her from the office, escorted her to his car, turned around in the garage, drove out to the street, swung around the corner, pulled the car in to the curb, shut off the motor, turned to her with a peculiar expression on his face.

"So," he said slowly, "you're the Murder Girl."

She knew she could not deceive him further. "Yes," she said. "I'm the Murder Girl."

"And Bob Calso knows it?"

"Yes."

Sergeant Mahoney's voice was not unkindly. "You know," he said, "you're entitled to have a lawyer represent you. You don't need to say anything. Perhaps silence would be best for you, but I'd like to have you tell me about it."

"From the beginning?" she inquired.

"From the beginning," he told her. "Do you want to do it?"

She faced him unflinchingly. "Sergeant," she said, "I'm going to tell you everything."

His hand reached out and closed upon the back of hers. "Good girl," he said. "If I can give you a break I'll do it."

She started talking in a low monotone, told him everything, sparing no detail, beginning with the time Dringold had told her he was going to dictate a confession, including her first meeting with the woman in the black evening coat, about the murder, and her sudden panic. She even told him about encountering Jarvis C. Happ in the building.

SERGEANT MAHONEY waited until she had finished. Then he asked a few questions.

"Norman went to that apartment?" Sergeant Mahoney asked.

"Yes."

"Do you love him very much, Millicent?"

"I love him more than I love life."

"Suppose I should tell you that he is in great danger? Would you be willing to do anything you could to help?"

"Anything," she said.

"I want to bait a trap," he told her. "Will you help me?"

"How can I help you?"

His eyes stared steadily into hers. "You," he said, "are to be the bait. I want you to go to that apartment house. I want you to knock on the doors of the various apartments and start asking questions."

"But," she pointed out, "the apartment is vacant now. No one is there and they won't come back after the police have been there."

"But," he told her, "Norman didn't leave that apartment house. They could hardly have carried him out and he wouldn't have left voluntarily without having joined you in the cab."

"Then you think he's somewhere in the apartment house?"

"I'm virtually certain of it."

"And you believe my story?"

He nodded solemnly. "Yes," he said. "I'm going to have my men go around to the hotel and pick up the suitcase and your notepad with Dringold's confession as he had dictated it."

"What are you going to do?"

"Well," he said, "I'm going to be in charge of the squad of men who will surround that apartment house. I'm going to send you in there—perhaps to your death. At any rate, into great danger, but it's the only way to save Norman."

She set her lips into a firm line of determination. "Let's start," she said.

25-Year Reign in England Observed

Communists Howled Down—14 Hurt as Reviewing Stand Falls

NEWCASTLE, Eng.—(AP)—Fourteen persons were seriously injured and 50 less seriously hurt in the collapse of a stand Monday during a military parade here in connection with the Silver Jubilee celebration.

King, Queen Honored

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—A tumultuous roar, "God Save the King," burst from the throats of 50,000 jubilee-rejoicing British subjects Sunday night as King George and Queen Mary appeared on a balcony of Buckingham Palace.

Their majesties are celebrating 25 years on the throne.

Rewarding the patience of the throngs from dawn to dusk, charging through police lines once to witness the changing of the guards, their majesties came forth for 90 seconds. The road of acclamation rode higher than the shouts of Communists who marched on Hyde Park earlier in the day charging.

The jubilee celebration is war preparation.

Attempting to disrupt a meeting of 3,000 laborites in Hyde Park called to demonstrate the solidarity of the working classes, the Communists mixed in with the workers and sought to drown out their speakers.

The Red contingents injected fresh chaos into traffic conditions, already virtually paralyzed, and 700 hobbits, mounted and on foot, were required to marshal the demonstrators to the park.

The Communists belittled the "International" lustily, and flaunted banners bearing the slogans:

"We want bread, not jubilees."

"Fifty thousands pounds for King George and 17 shillings for George King."

Irked by the agitators, Herbert Morrison, one of the Socialist speakers and so-called "prime minister of London," retorted to their shouts and jeers:

"The Communists are supposed to be supporting us today, but they never can keep their word and their wonderful leaders cannot keep them in order."

"How many controls has your radio set?"

"Two, my wife and my daughter."

Chewing Gum LAXATIVE TASTES FINE

Children and finicky husbands take it gladly. For Peemint, the delicious mint chewing gum, tastes just like their favorite gum. There is no taste but the mint. But most important, Peemint is chewed, so the laxative, like food, is easily digested. Peemint is made from the most scientific method—chewing. Thus, intestines are gently, more naturally stimulated rather than forced. Peemint is ideal for both children and grown-ups, and doctors prescribe the laxative in it. Delay is dangerous. Today, get back on schedule and stay there without habit formation, increasing dosage or strain. Get Peemint at drugstore, 15c and 25c.

YOUR HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Prevent Tooth Stains With Tooth Brush.

Stains on your teeth result from a variety of causes. In most cases such stains are derived from the food that you eat and from permitting food debris to remain in contact with the teeth.

Most dentists recommend that these stains be removed by use of a mixture of two or three parts of water with hydrogen peroxide. Of course the dentist, at the time, when he cleans your teeth, may scrape away deposits on the enamel at the place where the gums join the teeth.

Most tooth pastes now available are quite satisfactory as an aid in cleaning the teeth. Probably results just about as good can be secured by using a toothbrush with a little soap or with a little salt water.

But most people prefer the pleasant taste and the feeling of cleanliness that comes with a properly flavored tooth paste. Children particularly are likely to clean the teeth much more regularly and often if they are provided with a pleasant tasting tooth paste for the purpose.

The argument goes on constantly as to whether a tooth paste is better than a tooth powder or vice versa.

The chief argument in favor of the tooth paste is ease of handling and less wastage. Furthermore, in the tube the material will keep a pleasant appearance and a uniform composition.

Some persons prefer powders because they think they get a better abrasive effect. Some dentists object to tooth pastes because they feel the paste may be left in the mouth and actually form a place in which germs may multiply.

Of course, no tooth paste is actually antiseptic. Not one of them will really destroy the germs of tooth decay. A powder that contains gritty materials may scratch the teeth or injure the delicate membranes of the mouth.

Nowadays, tooth pastes and tooth powders may be purchased at reasonable prices. However, some people may prefer to make up their own preparations for keeping the teeth clean. Several mixtures may be used in this way.

Table salt is a useful substance which has a stimulating effect on the gums. Willow charcoal also is useful when applied once or twice a week on a nearly dry brush, especially to brighten and polish the teeth.

Sodium perborate, which is now available in several different forms, when properly flavored, is an agreeable dentifrice with slightly antiseptic qualities, and is particularly useful in preventing trench mouth or Vincent's angina.

Another good tooth cleanser is a mixture of magnesium peroxide, six parts; sodium perborate, three parts, and pulverized soda, one part, because it does not contain any ingredient which may scratch the enamel of the teeth.

Sunbaths Brighten Baby's Future Outlook

Whatever the family's circumstances, in good weather there is no reason for depriving baby of sunbaths. In this second of a series of articles on Child Health Week, Olive Roberts Barton discusses how to protect baby from the dangers of sunburn.

We have become nationally sun-conscious regarding babies and little children. Those who live in the southern half of the United States cannot realize what a problem this presents to the northern parent.

Cod-liver-oil has to pinch-hit for Sol during the winter and makes a good enough substitute in its way, but the mother of a baby or an under-par child watches the sky and thermometer impatiently in April to see when she can begin those sun baths, strip the children and put them out to ripen like tomatoes.

We know now that certain vitamins are absolutely essential to health and therefore life.

First of all, unless she has had experience (and even then I urge it is best for the mother to talk the matter over with the doctor), the duration of the exposure should not be a matter of guess work, because sunlight is dangerous if overdone.

The first sun bath should be very brief, as little as five minutes. Increase in periods should be very, very slow. If it is cool outside, or windy, the baby can have his bed wheeled up to an open sunny window. Glass stops the beneficial rays. But I would not give the first bath on either a very cool or windy day, even though the room is heated. Better to choose favorable all-round weather conditions.

Keep Eyes Away From Sun

The buggy or play-yard on a protected porch is usually most convenient. Always keep a small baby's eyes away from the sun. Flee him away from it, but let him lie right in a patch of sunlight.

It won't be long until our heavenly vitamin-dispenser will overdo his job, especially at mid-day. When that happens the best time to curb his sun-solicitous fondling is before eleven and after three.

On boiling days just keep baby in the shade. Our business then is not to cook him but to cool him. When a baby or little child once gets used to the sun, he can stand more, but the "altogether" sun-bath is seldom given over an hour at most. If the doctor recommends it, it can be given twice a day.

Most Are Sun-Starved

The entire matter, I think, depends on the mother's good judgment, especially in tricky spring weather. She will watch to see that there is no danger of catching cold. She will take advantage of the least-windy hours.

Direct drafts will be discouraged by screens or by hanging blankets round the bed. If the baby sunburns easily on account of a super-delicate skin, she will harden him more slowly than his thicker-skinned brother.

But let's give thanks for the sun. We all need it, young and old. Most of us right now are sun-starved.

He Closed His Key, So 1500 Drowned—Radio Man's Role in Titanic Tragedy Told in Book

The 1500 people who died when the liner Titanic foundered in mid-ocean might all have been saved. Another liner was only 15 miles away at the moment the Titanic sank; but its people never knew of the tragedy, because its lone wireless operator, wearing a 18-hour day, had closed his key and gone to bed an hour before the Titanic sent out its SOS.

This is one of the bits of news to be found in "SOS to the Rescue," an exciting and dramatic book by Karl Baarslag.

Himself, sea-going wireless operator, Mr. Baarslag tells here the whole story of the use of wireless at sea, of the lives it has saved, and the tragedies it has mitigated. The story of the Titanic is his best-known exhibit, of course; but he has many other stories equally thrilling, and he has told them well.

He recalls, for instance, the stories of the Morro Castle and the Vestris—

Rain
Raining! Cold, bitter rain and harsh. The lawn is almost now a marsh. Good for the roses; True enough! But we need sun to do our stuff. We find no keen enjoyment in getting oneself soaked to the skin. Rain may bring blossoms fair to see. But it brings discomfort to you and me.

Rain! And divergent points of view. And both of them precariously true. Rain brings blossoms and the green. Which makes the lovely summer scene; Likewise to him who walks the street. For many days it spells defeat. But though man praises or complains. Grumbles or grins, some days it rains. —Selected.

70 Are Killed in Motor Accidents

New York Leads With 13 Deaths—California Second With 12

By the Associated Press
New York state, with 13 automobile accident deaths, and California, with 12, led the nation in week-end traffic fatalities.

Fatal accidents occurred in 22 states, with more than 70 persons killed. Hundreds of others were injured, many seriously. A number of pedestrians were killed.

In Los Angeles, where seven persons were hurt fatally, 100 others were injured.

A false alarm cost a Cleveland fireman his life. Three other firemen and two pedestrians also were hurt. The pedestrians, father and son, suffered broken legs. They were struck by the body of the fireman, catapulted from the truck and hurled 20 feet. The truck collided with an automobile.

Two firemen were killed at Albany. Five more were injured, one critically. A fire truck and a battalion chief's car collided. They were speeding to a rubbish fire.

The death list in the New York city area totaled eight persons, one of whom was killed by a hit-and-run driver. Three men were killed in other accidents in upstate New York.

hold its own in competition with foreign cotton growing territories, so far as concerns costs and prices.

"The problem is not how to keep for this country its dominance in world cotton production, but how to make cotton growing in the South a reasonably remunerative means of living for those who are dependent upon it."

Pointing out that the average grower can make 7 1/2 bales of cotton, Garfield showed that the task consumed nearly eight months of one person's time in the Eastern and Central belt and about five and one-half months in the Western belt, counting only the time devoted to the cotton itself.

From that work, Garfield declared he returns were meagre, but it was necessary to raise a cash crop to meet expenses that can not be covered in any other manner.

"It is obvious why the net returns to the growers cannot be permanently increased by raising the price of cotton arbitrarily or artificially, essential though this commodity is," he said.

"That price for cotton which yields the domestic growers only the barest living, as cotton growing now is conducted in this country, is sufficiently high to induce foreign growers to make enough cotton to keep the price down to that level."

The economist said foreign production increased as the price increased, under moderate circumstances.

"It would probably take some years for foreign countries to expand their output enough to offset fully a drastic curtailment of production in the United States, which was continued year in and year out, but the ultimate outcome of such prolonged curtailment could hardly be questioned," he said.

"It may be taken for granted that, ultimately, foreign countries will provide the world with whatever quantity of cotton the world needs and can pay for, over and above that which is furnished by the United States, and that, if the domestic crop were reduced and foreign production were expanded to meet the world's needs the price of cotton would then be the same as it would have been if the United States had not curtailed its production."

Restraint
"I hope you don't think I'm conceited," he said, after he had finished telling her all about himself.

"Oh, no," she replied. "But I'm just wondering how you can keep from giving three hearty cheers whenever you look at yourself in the glass."—Vancouver Province.

Revenues Finally Pass Total of Farm Benefit Payments

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Amid widespread disputes over processing taxes, the farm Adjustment Administration checked its financial standing Sunday and reported $777,540,884 in revenue and $776,103,578 of expenses.

The AAA report said this was where the rental and benefit payments went: Cotton $224,962,539; wheat $162,444,853; tobacco $31,216,317; corn-hogs $253,536,280 and sugar $6,256,933.

Costs of removal of surpluses, paid from the processing taxes, were reported as follows: Hogs $46,081,425; wheat $6,097,239; dairy products $10,958,431; sugar $365,536 and peanuts $350,911.

force and determination which, however blind or erroneous, makes for self-preservation, if not real success in life. She, more than any of the others, stood up with an ignorant, yet somehow respectable air of confidence. A general of the many who chanced to pass by, she dropped to her side, her glances fixed on her defects, probably by the definite she proclaimed.

The song a sermon by God had done the hymnals by a strap on it was the last to me they were.

"Oh, yes," asked me when "Praise the Lord and the Father."

And then a Bethel Independent Saturday night, "Come, and below that wrote to Mother."

"Kin' I have and got an in."

"Yes," he took a deep pocket of declining years. Her dark hair, with not restrain him too much, as maybe, she had—She looked affectionately and yet a little vacantly after him as he ran. "For his sake."

The small company, minus Russell, entered the yellow, unprepossessing door and disappeared.

The End.

Home Clubs

Old Liberty

The Old Liberty Home Demonstration club met at the home of Mrs. Guy Hicks, April 26, 1935. Devotional services by Miss Lela Hicks, who read the 23d Psalm, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary. Eleven members answered the roll call with three new members added and three visitors present.

Miss Griffin gave an interesting demonstration on sewing. She explained the house and church dress contest to be held at the next County Council meeting in June.

After the demonstration, we enjoyed several games directed by Miss Griffin. The club then adjourned to meet at the home of Mrs. Joe Moody, May 24, 1935. As we missed our demonstration on picture framing and chair covering, this will be our next demonstration.

Mr. and Mrs. John Caldwell had as week end guests, Mr. Caldwell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Caldwell Sr., and sister, Miss Mignonette Caldwell, of Jackson, Miss. Caldwell is head of the music department in Belhaven college, and gave a beautiful vocal selection at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning.

Mrs. Sue S. Wilson of Little Rock will arrive Tuesday, for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Ross R. Gillespie.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Chaney and daughter, Norma Joe, will leave Tuesday for a ten days visit with friends and relatives in Texas and Oklahoma points, returning home via the Ozarks.

On Sunday afternoon at the First Presbyterian church, sponsored by the Friday Music club, in celebration of National Music week, the Texarkana Choral club, under the direction of Mrs. Fred Marshall gave the music lessons of this city the privilege of hearing a high-meritorious program. The singers were greeted by a splendid congregation and Mrs. J. C. Cardon, president of the Friday Music club, presented Mrs. Marshall, who needs no introduction to Hope audiences. Having long since established herself with lovers of good music and worth while things, Mrs. Marshall expressed her pleasure in "coming home" and presented the president, assistant director and accompanist of the Choral club. The choruses were well selected and beautifully rendered. Outstanding features were a violin solo by Mrs. Collins Gaines, an organ number by Mrs. J. B. Daniels and a vocal selection by Mrs. Kenneth Spore. Club officers are: President, Mrs. E. S. Couch, vice president, Mrs. P. J. Ahern; conductor, Mrs. Fred Marshall; and accompanist, Mrs. J. B.
